PCC seminar for features journalists – 16 November

You may recall that last year the PCC hosted seminars for news editors and picture editors. We hoped to bring people up to date on the Commission's thinking in a variety of areas and to engage with people who make decisions under the Code. Judging by the feedback, the events were well received, and we have now been asked to repeat the exercise with more journalists.

The seminars – which are hosted by Alison Hastings and me – are designed to stimulate debate about the Code of Practice, and the PCC's approach to complaints, in a lively and informal way.

The next seminar will be held on 16 November for national newspaper features editors and journalists. It will be held in the Staple and Gray's Inn Room at the Chancery Hotel, High Holborn, and will begin at 6.30pm. It should be over by about 8.30pm. I would be very grateful if someone from your office could get in touch with my PA, Kim Baxter, to let us know who will be coming. Her email address is

Please do contact Kim or me if you have any queries.

With kind regards
