The PCC and the Editors' Code of Practice Committee is about to embark on a series of meetings with online editors to consult on the content of new guidance about how to deal with complaints about newspaper and magazine websites, with particular regard to audio-visual content.

This follows confirmation by the Press Standards Board of Finance – the committee of industry owners and managers which funds the system of self-regulation – that the Code of Practice does in principle include audio-visual journalistic material. There has been a reference in the Code for a number of years to 'online versions of publications', but the online services now offered are so diverse that it is in any case a good opportunity to think in depth about the application of the Code to publishers' internet operations.

Of course, much content - advertising, competitions, promotions, most usergenerated material, third party websites and so on - is excluded from the PCC's jurisdiction. Our interest is in journalistic material where an editorial decision has been taken at some point about its commission or use.

With audio-visual material particularly, but not exclusively, in mind, we will be consulting among other things on how future complaints might be resolved, how the sanction of a critical adjudication might apply, the notion of 'due prominence' in correcting accuracy complaints about AV material, and the scope of the PCC's jurisdiction.

Colleen Harris MVO, FRSA Vivien Hepworth Peter Hill Ian Beales – the Secretary of the Code Committee – and I will be hosting a series of small meetings here at the PCC on the 28^{th} and 29^{th} September. My PA Kim Baxter will be in touch soon to try to find a convenient time for you, and I will write again next month with a more detailed agenda. The aim is to publish new guidance – which will need to be approved by the boards of PressBoF, the Commission and the Code Committee – sometime in the autumn.

I look forward to seeing you next month.

With kind regards.
